“ I shared many late night FB messenger conversations with Kimbra. She was so warm, kind, supportive and encouraging all while struggling with her own issues. It was evident what Darren, her parents and her mother in law meant to her. Endless family, friends and virtual friends are mourning the loss of Kimbra profoundly. Love to all.

“ Kimbra had a way about her like no other. She was so kind hearted and it was easy to get to know her. We had a quick connection and even though I didn't have a lot of time to get to know her well, I feel as though we were lifelong friends. I'm going to miss her!! Love you Kimbra my sister in Christ.

“ I went to Camp Eagle's Nest with Kimbra. I always have been so shy that it made it hard to make friends. I had no problem becoming friends with Kimbra. There were three of us, me, Kimbra, and Julie. We were pretty much attached at the hip. I can only hope Kimbra had some inkling of how important she was to not only me and Julie, but all the other kids, especially the younger ones that were new and scared. Every year there would be one or two that just latched on to her and she just scooped them right up without a second thought. I'm so glad that I was able to reconnect with her a few years ago. We never managed to coordinate an in person visit, no good excuse for that, we just kept saying someday, but it was wonderful to have her back in my life even if only on Facebook. My heart goes out to everyone who loves her. I know her passing leaves a huge hole in the world. I will miss her terribly.

Love and prayers,

“ I remember my first visit. Because Kimbra's state is six hours behind the UK, although it took me about twenty hours to get there, I arrived in the early evening, absolutely exhausted. Having travelled before I knew that if I surrendered and went to bed as soon as I arrived, my internal clock would not get turned around. So I gave her instructions to keep me awake.

Kimbra's response to that was to arrange for us to attend a Halloween party that very evening! I had two hours to book into my hotel and change into costume. (I was slimmer then and went as an elf.) When I arrived at Nashville airport, a hobbit lass (in green dirndl skirt and bodice, with false curls attached to her trainers) flew into my arms and hugged me so tightly I could hardly breathe. What others thought of the sight I will never know, because I was too busy hugging back.

I will always miss you, Kimbra.
