“My mom was bigger than life itself and I can't imagine the world without her. Up until her last moments in this world, her concern was for those who were at her side whether it was her family or the nurses and other caretakers who tried so hard to keep her here with us. Did we need anything? Was there anything she could do for us? Her gratitude, goodness and sometimes just a little mischief shining through with that beautiful smile that came straight from her heart.

She embraced life like no one I've ever known. She was the most spiritual person I've ever known. She was my defender and protector, she loved and believed in me no matter what. She knew when she called me if I had been crying even when I thought I was doing a great job of hiding my tears when the phone rang. She had a connection to her children that was almost supernatural. She knew when any of the three of us needed her prayers or just to hear her voice.

I know she is able to breathe and run and laugh out loud without pain now. I know she is with our Lord, her little brother, all of those she loved that have gone before her. I know she is in Heaven but I believe if there is any way possible, she will still be defending, protecting, loving and praying for me and all of her family and friends. While I would never ask that she have to be in this world in the way that she was for the last few years just so she could be here with me again, I will always feel lost without her.

We were all blessed to have had the honor of her presence in our lives. I can't say goodbye. I just want to promise her I will try to live the rest of my life with her as my example of how it should be done. And as I type those words I'm thinking, "I am really going to have to step it up a notch or two... or three, to even come close". I will miss her so so much.

Thank you all for your love and support through this difficult time.

“ Ms. Susie was a lovely woman and friend to me and my children. I know she was my dad's good friend as well and will be missed by all of us. What a great southern Christian lady she was and I wish I had known her longer.

We will miss you Ms. Susie
